Theological Students.....		13.

Aim.—The object of the Theological Department is to train men to be ministers of the Gospel. The effort will be to cultivate earnest piety, sound scholarship, and right habits of thought and expression.

Admission.—The Department is open to students of every denomination. Every applicant for admission must present testimonials of his Christian character, and of his having received a good education in the common English branches. All applicants will be examined with reference to their personal piety, their object in pursuing theological studies, and, if they have not received a collegiate or high school diploma, in reading, writing, grammar, geography, history, and arithmetic.

Instruction.—Not less than three years will be required to complete the course, and throughout the entire course the Holy Scriptures will be made the principal study; but in addition to exegetical studies, during the first year special attention will be given to Rhetoric and the English Language, and to evidences of Christianity; the second year to Mental Philosophy and Biblical and Systematic Theology; the third year, to Church History, Homiletics and Pastoral Theology. Theological Students will also be permitted to attend, free of expense, the Lectures in the University, and will have free access to the Library and Reading Room.

Elocution.—Thorough training in Elocution will be given with frequent exercises in reading the Scriptures and hymns, and in the delivery of sermons and ex-temporaneous addresses.

Expenses.—No charges will be made for instruction. Good board can be had at reasonable rates. The Board of Trustees have no scholarships nor beneficiary funds for this department, but they will secure aid as far as possible to enable every young man who gives promise of usefulness in the ministry, to complete the course of study.

Terms and Vacations.—The sessions will be commenced on the first Thursday in October and continue till the last Thursday in March. By this arrangement the most favorable season will be secured for study, and the six months of vacation can be devoted to manual labor, to teaching, or to missionary work under the direction of some benevolent society or experienced pastor. It is expected that every student will be present at the beginning of the session. The Recitations and Lectures will commence promptly.

Instruction.—The curriculum of this Department consists of recitations ; written essays by the students on subjects of law, with reference to authorities ; moot courts ; and lectures on common law, constitutional law, equity, and kindred subjects.

Course, Degree.—The whole course of instruction will occupy two years, and the Degree of Bachelor of Laws will be conferred on those who have complied with the regulations of the University, and have passed a satisfactory examination.

Special Privilege.—By special statute of the Legislature, those students upon whom the honors of the Law School are conferred will be permitted to practice in all the courts of the State without other examination or credentials.

Note.—It is expected that further appointments of Professors in this Department will be made at an early day.

Aim.—This Department has been organized to furnish opportunities for a thorough business education, to students who look forward to some business employment.

Instruction.—There are two Courses of Study ; a shorter course to include instruction in Arithmetic, and its application to commercial transactions ; in Grammar, and the appropriate forms of business ; in Book - Keeping, by Single and Double Entry, sufficient to enable one to keep a set of books for the ordinary avocations in life ; in the principles of Penmanship ; and in the simple principles of Commercial Law.

In addition to the above, the complete course includes instruction in the science of accounts, as applied to partnership, agencies, exchange, commission, manufacturing, railroading, banking, shipping, and other forms of business.

Admission.—Students can enter this Department at any time when it is in session, as instruction is given to individuals rather than to classes.

Expenses. —Penmanship, per month.....	$2 00
Book-Keeping alone, per month.....	2 00
Arithmetic and Grammar, per month.....	2 00
Instruction in all, per month.....	5 00
One Scholarship for a year in shorter course...	50 00
One Scholarship for a year in complete course	75 00

The Sessions of this Department are from 6 to 10 P. M. thus affording opportunities to those otherwise engaged during the day.

Instruction is given to ladies during the day.

Elementary Students.....714.

Aim.—This Department was temporarily organized to furnish instruction to that large class who have but little knowledge of the rudiments of an English education. Many of these are adults, and some have a fair education in their native language. This class is instructed in Day and Night Schools, and is an interesting feature of the University.

Admission.—A limited number of pupils will be admitted to this Department, and those will be preferred who give the greatest promise of scholarship and usefulness. Classes are organized at the commencement of each term, and pupils should be present at the beginning of the term and remain to the end. Preference will be given to those who purpose to remain through the term.

Applicants.—All applicants should communicate with the Principal, stating name, age, residence, parents or guardians, and attainments.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

Instruction.—This Department has been organized, and a Faculty of eminent resident physicians and surgeons has been elected.

Lectures will commence as soon as buildings and cabinets have been secured.

To its immunities students will be admitted without regard to sex; and it is designed to render every department of demonstrative and experimental science complete. The legislative act which established this Department gave its Professors the use of "Charity Hospital" as a school of practical instruction. In this Hospital there are usually about one thousand patients; and members of the classes will have gratuitous admission to all the wards, thus having a wide field for the practical study of diseases and their scientific treatment.

Admission.—For admission, students are required to possess a through English education and a sufficient knowledge of the Latin language to understand prescriptions and the medical terms in common use.

Graduates of all respectable Schools, and ordained clergymen, will be admitted to the Lectures without charge. Arrangements have been made by which a part of the expenses of indigent students will be remitted. For specific information, address the Dean of the Medical Faculty.

COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT.

Aim.—The design of this Department is to furnish such disciplinary training as is necessary to prepare the student to enter upon the more advanced studies of the learned Professions.

Admission.—Candidates for admission will be examined in Geography, (ancient and modern); Arithmetic; Algebra, through Simple Equations; English, Latin, and Greek, Grammar; Cæsar's Commentaries; Virgil (six books of the Æneid); Cicero's Select Orations; Xenophon's Anabasis; Homer's Iliad; or other authors equivalent in quantity to the above.

Candidates for advanced standing will be also examined in studies gone over by the class which they propose to enter.

GENERAL INFORMATION.

History.—Feeling the imperative necessity of a school of higher learning, and at the same time one of a more liberal character than had hitherto existed in New Orleans, the commercial metropolis of the south-west, a few representative men, heartily in sympathy with the enterprise, conceived the idea of planting this University.

Incorporation.—By their united efforts an Act of Incorporation was secured, June 25, 1869, "with the power to confer all such degrees and honors as are conferred by Universities in the United States of America."

Location.—The University buildings on the corner of Esplanade and Derbigny streets, in a pleasant and healthful part of the city, are retired from the din of business, and at the same time are easily accessible from all parts of the city by means of the different lines of street railway.

Admission.—For admission to any of the departments, candidates must furnish evidence of good moral character, and those coming from other schools must bring testimonials of honorable dismissal.

The moral character of the student is considered of primary importance, and no student will be allowed to remain a member of the University, whose character is doubtful.

Rules and Regulations.—Copies of the Rules and Regulations, approved by the Faculty and adopted by the Trustees, are placed in the hands of the students.

The rules are few and appeal to the self-respect and personal responsibility of the pupil. Such discipline is enforced as would be adopted by a wise and judicious parent. No student is allowed to enter the departments of the other sex without special permission.

Examinations.—At the end of each Term, the classes are examined in the studies of that term; and the Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next preceding Commencement are occupied with general examinations of all Departments.

Reports.—The standing of students, based upon the recitations and examinations, is kept by the Principal of the Department; and a copy of this standing and the Department of each student for the Term, is sent to the parent or guardian.

Lectures.—Lectures on Literary and Scientific subjects are given by members of the Faculty and others, on Wednesday evenings, in the Chapel.

Private practical lectures on character, general habits, methods of study, and other important subjects, are also given to the students.

Rhetorical Exercises.—Each member of the higher departments is instructed in writing and speaking. Public Rhetorical exercises, consisting of declamations, recitations, and compositions, occur each Wednesday afternoon, from 12½ to 2 o'clock, P. M. Each student will participate in these exercises, unless excused by the parent or guardian.

Library.—A general Library of several hundred volumes has been donated to the University, which is open to students. Special efforts will be made to induce in the student habits of reading and study, and the friends of the Institution are earnestly invited to make contributions to this means of culture.

Literary Society.—The Sumner Literary Association, organized during the past year, affords the students the privileges, and facilities for improvement, usually found in such societies.

Religious Exercises.—Students of the Collegiate, Normal, Academic and Elementary Departments attend morning prayers in the Chapel.

On the Sabbath there is preaching in the Chapel, morning and evening; also Sabbath school in the afternoon. In the same place on Thursday evening, is held the weekly lecture.

Expenses.—The moderate charge of $1.00 per month will be made the students of each Department, except the Normal and Theological. The expenses of the latter Departments are defrayed by benevolent gentlemen. This monthly charge covers all expenses of tuition and incidentals.

Aid.—Deserving and promising students will have their tuition remitted, by application to the President.

Endowment.—Efforts are being made for the permanent endowment of Professorships, and Scholarships; and in this connection, among those whose beneficence is worthy of note, we are pleased to make special mention of C. F. Hammond, Crown Point, N. Y., and J. R. Dike, Crystal Lake, Ill.

Aims and Needs.—It is the aim of the University to meet an imperative necessity and furnish all who would enjoy its advantages, the most thorough and ample culture, and so fit them for usefulness and honor. Its aims must meet the approval, and its needs must enlist the co-operation of the liberal minded every where.

The Theological Department has neither buildings nor library. The Academical Department has land and buildings for instruction, but needs a Boarding Hall for students from abroad. We wish to invite talented youth from other localities; and, to do this, a home must be provided for them. No better investment could be made than in this direction. The University must be endowed, to be permanently useful. Funds for scholarships and professorships are therefore needed. A great work is entrusted to this Institution, and the stewards of Christian beneficence every where are invited to remember in their prayers and aid it by their gifts.
